

Preserving Memories

Are you sentimental but pressed for time? Do you take lovely family photos and stick them in a box? Then you may thank your lucky stars that STUDIO162 has arrived on the scene. Recent college grad Lauren Clayton has set up shop in Stamford, launching a graphic design firm that specializes in custom-made heirloom books.

Lauren's beautifully prepared volumes help her clients preserve their personal histories for generations to come. She has created works that range from vacation books using photos, stamps, postcards and narrative to anniversary albums using black-and-white photos that chronicle a couple's courtship. Recently, Ms. Clayton was asked to make a tribute compilation for Dr. Bill Cosby. For that project, she converted black-and-white snapshots into sepia-toned images with jewel-colored highlights. "The book was very well received," Ms. Clayton noted.

Because of her use of the narrative word, gathered through interviews and conversations with clients, Lauren's works are more dramatic than the average scrapbook or photo album. In the end, each archival quality book tells a unique story. If you would like to learn more, contact Lauren at 316-0331 or info@studio162.com.
